Helmintoller, pastor of the Methodist Church, Culpepper, Va., and formerly pastor of the Bedford Methodist Church, will teach the Course- "The Life of Jesus", using the textbook, "Luke's Portrait of Jesus" by Charles M. Laymon. This course is designed especially for teachers and workers with Children and Young People but will be of special interest to all who desire a more profound belief in the Life and Teachings of Jesus. Members of other denominations of our community are cordially invited to attend any of the three courses being offered in the School, and credit for these courses can be arranged with the several denominations. Rev. Helmintoller is a native of Ho; Springs, Va., and has served all of his ministry in the Virginia Conference.

Course on Prayer

Dr. George W. Arnos, pastor of the Memorial Methodist Church, Richmond, Va., will be the instructor for the Course on Prayer, using the textbook, "The Dimensions of Prayer" written by Douglas V. Steere, who states in his book — "Prayer is for the religious life what original research is for science. Stillness, waiting, and patience before the Lord are authentic dimensions of the human perceptive equipment." This Course is being sponsored by the Woman's Societies of Christian Service of the Appomatox Area; but the course is of general and specific interest to all who hunger and thirst for a more personal comprehension of Prayer. Dr. Arnos is extremely well qualified to lead in the discussion of this subject since the major part of his ministry has given to evangelism and personal communion.

The three classes will be held each evening of the week, April 22-26, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock, and running for fifty minutes, with two class session each evening broken by a ten-minute intermission and closing promptly at 9:20 o'clock.

All of the Methodist Churches of the Appomattox Area Subdistrict of the Lynchburg District will participate in the School and neighboring Methodist churches and churches of other denominations are cordially invited to participate in the School.

Hudgins Given 50 Year Pin

R. B. Hudgins, retired county agent, was presented a 50 year pin at the April meeting of Monroe Lodge, AF & AM, Appomattox, by his son, Lester P. Hudgins, of Lynchburg. Hudgins first joined Stonewall Lodge 200, Arvonia, in Buckingham County in 1911. He then transferred to Monroe Lodge 201, Appomattox, where he has been active in Masonic affairs ever since. With the gold card accompanying his pin, Hudgins can enter any Masonic lodge in the U. S. In return, R. B. Hudgins presented his son with a Masonic pin. H. C. Pulliam and J. A. Burke paid high tribute to Hudgins during the presentation ceremonies. Pulliam said, "It was a great day when Hudgins came to Appomattox County. He improved farming practices and introduced better crop rotation, including clover, grasses, alfalfa, dairying and beef cattle raising." Hudgins worked closely with the Soil Conservation Service in conservation of the soil. Both Pulliam and Burke stressed the importance of Hudgins' many years of service to the county as a public servant and as a Mason.

Baby Ace Almost Ready To Fly

A career Navy man has a "bird" almost ready to fly this spring. It's a Baby Ace, single seater homemade airplane which he transported through Appomattox on Saturday, April 6.

Chief Electrician Robert Boston, together with his wife and three children en route from Norfolk to Memphis stopped at Maude's Restaurant for lunch and a chat about his "baby" outside. The plane was being towed on its landing wheels with propeller facing to the rear. Boston says he's been working on it for about three years. His tour of duty with the U.S.S. ENTERPRISE has kept hi m from his hobby, he says. He's a member of the Experimental Aircraft Association and reports that probably 1,000 other homemade Baby Ace's have been built within the past ten years. Boston's plane will be ecuipped with a 65 h. p. Franklin engine.

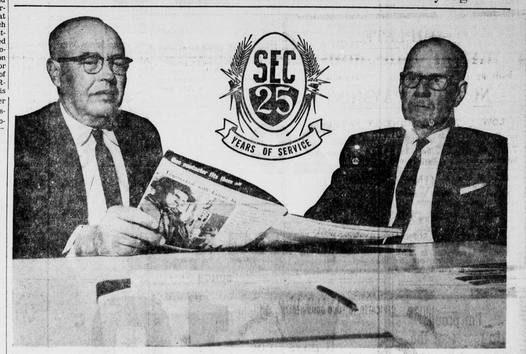
Southside Electric Director Talks With Dinwiddie County Agent



B. F. Bedwell, of Dinwiddie Henry Thrift, of Dinwiddie

Development of the Rural Electric Program in Virginia Was as Colorful and Dynamic as Today's Space Program

The development of the rural electric program in Virginia was just as colorful and dynamic in the late 1930's as has been the space program of recent years, according to B. F. Bedwell, Dinwiddie County's Extension Agent for the past 25 years.

"I saw it being born, I have seen it grow, and I think it has been just as colorful and dynamic in the development of this nation as will be the space program of today," Mr. Bedwell said to Henry Thrift, also of Dinwiddie, and a Director of the Southside Electric Cooperative for the past 20 years.

And as Mr. Thrift talked with "Bed," as the Dinwiddie County Extension Agent is affectionately known through his area, Mr. Bedwell pulled out a copy of his annual report of 25 years ago and read several sentences from it.

". . . local leaders and committeemen cooperated 100 per cent in this project (the development of the Southside Electric Cooperative)"

". . . at the end of the year of 1939 we have approximately 180 miles of cooperative line completed and energized in this county which is more mileage than any other county has, now being served by the Southside Electric Cooperative."

". . . these lines are supplying current to approximately 575 rural homes in Dinwiddie County."

". . . while the agent is in no way claiming credit for this project, he has assisted in every way possible in getting the project organized, creating interest among prospective customers and conducting educational campaigns."

". . . at the present time the agent is cooperating with the organization in organizing a campaign designed to increase the load per mile of line already constructed."

And that is the way the rural electric program got started in Dinwiddie County, and Henry Thrift just beamed as he continued to talk with Mr. Bedwell about the progress the program has made in Southside Virginia.

Projects Benefits

And then Mr. Bedwell started to project the benefits of the program into the future for the 1,200 farm units in Dinwiddie County.

It has become a great labor saving device in many other areas and I look for the bulk curing of bright tobacco to start in this area. In this one development alone, made possible only because of this electric service, the problem of the availability of labor is minimized. This process will eliminate about one-third of the labor needs.

Then in the peanut industry here, and there are thousands of acres of peanuts in Dinwiddie County. The drying of peanuts in the curing process is made possible by electricity.

And don't forget the pig farrowing houses. Floor heat for this industry is essential, and here, too, electricity does the job.

And Mr. Bedwell went on for several hours, for Mr. Thrift was there discussing with him the benefits and needs of the program which he represents as a Director from Dinwiddie County.

And Mr. Bedwell was an inspiration to him and to several others who listened to the conversation.

It was just another example of the real value of the rural electric program to rural America, coming as it did, 25 years ago, when electricity was needed in rural America, but rural America couldn't get the electric industry then available to bring it to them.

And the talk with Mr. Bedwell is also an example of the value of this program to the rural people today and for the years to come.

This is the space age, a growth from the electric industry. And the rural electric program, made possible to the rural people of Southside Virginia by the Southside Electric Cooperative has been an important part in the development of this space age.

"I love my farm friends," Mr. Bedwell said in conclusion. "I naturally would, because I work with them; but more than that, I feel they are the ones who have really put the solid foundation into American progress, for their own good, for the good of the urban dweller, and for this great space age in which we now find ourselves.

"If I had to live my life over, I'd come right back here to Dinwiddie County, and the rural electric program would still be one of my pet projects—only I probably would work harder to develop it, than I did, if such could be possible."
